DECONSTRUCTING THE GLOBAL SOUTH NOTION:
MIGRATION, POLITICAL ECONOMY AND ETHNOGRAPHY

"Based on comparative ethno-historical research on the migrations to Brazilian cities, to the US city of New Bedford, MA and to Lisbon, Portugal, I pay attention to the global processes restructuring these cities as well as migrants' political mobilization and their local and transnational practices through time. These ethnographies discern capitalism processes' unevenness, the persistence of imperial power relations and the deconstruction of the Global South mega notion."
